What is SkyWarn

The effects of severe weather are felt every year by millions of Americans. To help reduce severe weather information, NOAA's National Weather Service (NWS), part of the U.S. Department of Commerce, established SKYWARN with partner organizations. SKYWARN is a volunteer program with over 250,000 trained severe weather spotters. These individuals have been trained to identify severe weather and to relay timely and accurate reports of severe weather to the National Weather Service.

Although SKYWARN spotters provide important information for all types of weather hazards, the main responsibility of a SKYWARN spotter is to detect and warn the public of severe thunderstorms in their area. In just 20 years, since its inception, it has had thousands and more than 1,000 tornadoes touch across the United States. These events threaten lives and property.

Since the program started in the 1980s, the information provided by SKYWARN spotters, along with other sources of information, improved severe weather detection and warning services. SKYWARN spotters provide the precious gift of time—seconds and minutes more than can help save lives.

Who is Eligible?

NWS encourages anyone with an interest in public service and access to communication, such as radio, radio amateurs, the media, schools, government agencies, businesses and the personal, amateur and professional public, utility workers and other concerned private citizens, individuals affiliated with hospitals, schools, churches, nursing homes or who have a responsibility for protecting others are also encouraged to become a SKYWARN spotter.
